Art Unit: 1731

1. Newly submitted claims 20-24 are directed to an invention (i.e. a method) that is independent or distinct from the invention originally claimed (i.e. product) for the following reasons: the process as claimed can be used to produce another and materially different product such as one which has different air permeability.

Since applicant has received an action on the merits for the originally presented invention, this invention has been constructively elected by original presentation for prosecution on the merits. Accordingly, claims 20-24 are withdrawn from consideration as being directed to a non-elected invention. See 37 CFR 1.142(b) and MPEP § 821.03.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 6-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ishino et al. (5,722,433) in view of Saji et al. (5,118,533).

Ishino et al. teaches a paper and a cigarette made therefrom having a coating of cellulose derivative thereon and a permeability of greater than 20 Coresta units. Ishino et al. also discloses that the cellulose derivative is ethyl cellulose (col. 10, line 16), the cellulose derivative can be applied to both sides of the paper (col. 10, line 30), and the cellulose derivative is applied in a quantity of greater than 1g/m² (col. 10, line 40).

Art Unit: 1731

Note that the coating method is of no consequence since the claims are product claims and the method steps provide no limitations on the metes and bounds of the product.

Ishino et al. does not specifically recite that the coating is produced by applying several layers to the paper.

Saji et al. teaches coating of paper to apply the claimed amounts of coating material and discloses that the coating may be applied in a single layer or in multiple layers (col. 5, line 65). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to apply the coating as multiple layers in view of the generic disclosure of Ishino et al or in view of the equivalence teaching of Saji et al.

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 6-19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
